RE-ENTER THE BIG NOISE.

A year in the jungle has not lessened the conviction of Theodore Roosevelt that he is entitled to lecture the whole world on any topic under the sun. His first public utterance in Egypt may have required some courage but its propriety was open to serious question, says the Boston Commercial.

Mr. Roosevelt left no doubt in the minds of his hearers, or of those who have read the telegraphic reports of his address, that he does not sanction the opposition to English rule in Egypt on the part of the nationalists. Those young Egyptians who have read history as it is written must be rather hazy in their minds as to the principles laid down in the American Declaration of Independence when the foremost man of this republic in the eyes of the world takes such a stand by addressing them.

Kostland has doubtless a similar problem in ruling Egypt to that we have in the Philippines, and this was doubtless what caused Mr. Roosevelt to say what he did; but it has always been assumed that we are in the Philippines on an errand of mercy while no one goes so far as to claim that Great Britain is in Egypt on the same basis that the United States is in the Philippines.

It sounds peculiar to hear a citizen of any republic, let alone this one, defend the imperialistic policy of another government, that is, if you are not acquainted with the citizen. Nothing that Theodore Roosevelt may do will surprise the citizens of this country.

It should not be forgotten that Mr. Roosevelt is on his way to Europe where royal receptions await him at the hands of reigning monarchs. His speech in Egypt assures him a warm welcome at the hands of the English Tories and it is fair to assume that he may have had some such idea in mind when he prepared his address, although if we take him at his word, he is just the sort of man who would not attempt to carry favor by such tactics.

So far as the question of propriety is concerned, it may be fair to ask whether the residents of Boston in the period just preceding the revolution would have relied from a foreigner such advice as Roosevelt has handed out to the Egyptian nationalists. The situation is not markedly different.

The trouble with the former president is that he considers himself an authority on every subject which can be brought up, whether it deals with government, morality, law, natural history, orthography, athletics or whatever. He has been confirmed in this idea by a large circle in this country who consider that he can do no wrong, even if the results of his activities are manifested by idle factories, empty dinner pails and stagnant business.

It must not be assumed that the Egyptians are any less intelligent than the Americans. Their civilization is one of the oldest and their libraries were famous before Columbus dreamed of discovering the western passage to Asia. For a foreign visitor passing through the country for a few days to pretend that he has mastered the local political situation to such an extent as to be qualified to instruct the people as to the proper course to pursue is purely Rooseveltian.

Mr. Roosevelt has stated that he will not discuss our politics either on the way home or after his arrival here. We believe that he will hold to this determination and do not look for any outburst such as would gladden the hearts of Pinchot, Glavin, Garfield, et al., but this resolve evidently does not extend to the politics of other nations through which he may pass and if he is no more fortunate in his choice of subjects in other places than he has been in Egypt, the high opinion which has been formed of the man abroad may take a tumble before he sights Sandy Hook.

END OF REPUBLICAN PARTY DRAWS NEAR.

The democratic party was never in a better condition than at the present time for winning a fall campaign. Though the congressional elections will not occur until next November every indication points to a victory for that party, perhaps unequalled in the past. The republican party has been in power so long and has served the special interests so long that its boldness has become unbearable all over the country. It is not in one state where the republican party is being pilloried by public opinion, because of its contempt for the rights of the people, but it is in every state from the lakes to the gulf and from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The national election was won by the republicans in 1908 on the promise that there would be an immediate revision of the tariff in response to the universal demand of the people. Only for that promise the republicans would have been buried under an avalanche of votes at the last election. The tariff revision law passed by the special session of congress last year was a farce; it was dictated by the protected interests of the country as well as other republican tariff measures have been; instead of lowering the cost of living it has increased the burdens of the people.

The present attempt of many republicans to lay on the blame for the sins of the republican party on Aldrich and Cannon will not avail in silencing the wrath of the voters next fall. Aldrich and Cannon are nothing more than representatives of the republican party and that party must stand sponsor for their loyalty to the trusts and special interests.

In the state of Indiana last week a republican convention dared not endorse the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, but they went a long way in that direction when they declared for a protective tariff. Adherence to the principle by the republican party that it is right to take from the consumer of the country and give to the manufacturer is what has built up the trusts and monopolies of the country. This protection accounts for the high living of today and until the protected monopolies of the country are brought to book there will be no relief for the homes of the country.

The democratic party for years has stood for the principle of a tariff for revenue only and pointed to the protective policy promoted and upheld by the republican party. The American people have at last awakened to a realization that the longer the republican party is trusted the worse their condition will become and it may be said with confidence that they have determined to have no more Aldrichism, Cannonism and other laws upheld by the republican party.

WHEN LODGE IS SHORN OF HIS TOGA.

Some day, in the fullness of time and the progress of events, by the hand of Providence which moves in a mysterious way, or by the hand of the Massachusetts voter, which has seemed to be suffering from paralysis—and let us pray that rather it may be by the latter method—we shall witness that distressing and painful hear when the honorable Henry Cabot Lodge shall be torn and separated from the bosom of the United States senate. Then, and not till then, shall we of the younger generation, see, even if we are unable to understand, how that august body shall conduct and deport itself without the presence of the senior senator from the Old Bay state to maintain its dignity and uphold its traditions.

The Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge is something more than mere senator. He is orator, scholar and literateur. For seventeen years—some fat and some lean—through war and peace, through trials and triumphs, he has been the beacon light casting his effulgent rays along the sinuous pathway of legislation, illuminating its dark and devious passages with the scintillating brilliancy of his intellect, and making bright with the splendor of his personality the sombre chamber wherein to smile is held to be a misdemeanor and to applaud is regarded as only a little less wicked than to commit treason. For more than a century the United States senate in some way quite difficult to comprehend, managed to meet and exist without ever having heard of the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, much less to be honored by his membership. Perhaps it was only waiting for Lodge, the chroniclers do not say, but now that it has him, it will, of course, be loth to part with him. For nearly two decades he has sat at the right hand of Aldrich and has been his chief lieutenant, his spokesman, when the time came for oratorical effervescence.

But now there are strange rumors, rumblings and reports coming from the old commonwealth. News that Plymouth Rock was being pounded into dust could not be more astonishing, alarming or distressing. Somewhere, in more classic language than this, the thought is expressed that the growler shall go to the grocery once too often. The cradle of political liberty has become the hotbed of political libertines and the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, so it is said, is Shame, that anyone should seek to snatch from him the toga which he has worn with such dignity and becoming grace, but perhaps, there's a reason.—Frank B. Lord in Norman E. Mack's National Monthly for April.

CANNONISM DEFINED FOR A REPUBLICAN READER.

Editor Star—I would be pleased if you would define the word Cannonism for me. It is an expression that is constantly appearing in the newspapers, but I note that no one goes so far as to attempt to show by cold facts that Cannonism is a bad thing for the country. Please define Cannonism for me.—A REPUBLICAN READER.

Cannonism means government by the special interests. If "special interests" is too vague, we will put it in another way, for it is far from our desire to wish to handle the subject of Cannonism vaguely. Cannonism means government too much dictated by the steel trust, the sugar trust, the barvester trust, the lumber trust, the combination of New England cotton manufacturers, Standard Oil, the railroads and the Rockefeller-Morgan-Wall street banks.

Cannonism means that when the interests of the common people and the interests of such corporations as those indicated, comes into conflict, the special interests get the legislation they want and the common people get that which they do not want. (See Payne-Aldrich law for concrete illustration.)

Belled down, the term Cannonism means legislation shaped and framed less in accordance with the needs and desires of the American people, and more in accordance with the needs and desires of those big interests which donate liberally to campaign funds or control state political machines. National needs, under Cannonism, are entirely secondary to party needs.

"Anything to build up the party," is the cry of the Cannonites. It is typical of the Cannon type of politicians to regard federal positions as the legitimate prey of the party triumphant on election day. "Work," he ejaculates, after he gets his job in Washington, "I worked to get here! You don't expect me to work now that I am here. Progressive legislation, under Cannonism is a myth, only fit for use in stump campaign speeches; but party solidarity—why that is something practical, a reality, as it were.

But where does "Uncle Joe" come in, is asked. "Uncle Joe" is merely a part of a great machine. Fire is concentrated on him because his position as speaker of the house keeps him in the spotlight more than it does the other Cannonists. Yet he is little more to blame for the work of the complete machine than any one of those 155 members who to every practical end placed their approval on Cannonism when they voted against the Burleson resolution which would have deprived Cannon of the speakership. Cannonism does not refer to one man; it refers to a system or policy which would be as bad under any other name.

"Then you retract the charges that have been made against the speaker personally?" the republican reader is no doubt asking. Not at all. "Uncle Joe" personally misuses the power vested in him as speaker to block and chloroform proposed legislation desired by the people, and to promote the passage of measures demanded by the campaign-contributing special interests.

It is the speaker's duty to appoint all committees save the committee on rules. It is a notorious fact that Speaker Cannon has packed every important committee of the house with men who have the same convictions on particular legislation that must of necessity come before them that he has. In this way the speaker wields an enormous power, because he can block or hurry the passage of any legislation he desires.

All but nine of the two hundred and eighteen republicans in the house voted against the resolution to unseat "Uncle Joe." The milk in the cocoanut, therefore, is that Cannonism and the present republican party are synonymous!

During his long service in congress Hon. Marcus A. Smith ranked as one of the ablest men who ever represented a territory in that body. He was recognized because of his distinguished ability as an orator the country over. In his many speeches advocating the rights of Arizonans to enjoy self-government he attracted the attention and laudatory comments of the metropolitan press of the country. When the iniquitous joint-statehood measure was forced through the house he made a speech to the members of that body that was telegraphed to all the papers in the land. In that speech Mr. Smith got under the rhinoceros hide of Joe Cannon so effectively as to bring the old czar to the floor where he attempted to justify the action of his party.

Mark Smith on that occasion paid his respects to Tawney in a way that stripped the false mask from his face and left him defenseless as the traitor who had betrayed Arizona. The presence of such a man as Mark Smith in congress has been one of the causes which has brought to Arizona the respect and good opinion of the nation, and yet this man is made the object of the malignity and hatred of every tin-whistle republican editor in Arizona.

In the senate the other day inquiry was made about what had become of the promised printed report on the statehood bill. The inquiry brought a statement from Hale that Senator Beveridge had taken the report with him to Indiana where he intended to correct and revise it before turning it over to the public printer. It may be expected that Beveridge will delay the consideration of the statehood bill to the last possible moment in the hope that thereby its passage may be prevented without the necessity of republicans actually voting against it.

If the senate statehood bill passes without amendment the Republicans will have a string on the admission of Arizona and New Mexico which they can pull after the election results are known next fall. They will use the provision which requires the approval of the constitution by the president and congress as a club to force the people of the territories to vote the Republican ticket and falling in this they will pick a flaw in the constitution and leave poor Arizona and New Mexico to continue in the territorial wilderness.

The people of Cochise county must not overlook the urgent necessity for moving the county seat away from Tombstone to a point where it will be more accessible to the great mass of the population. A new county seat removal law will be required to accomplish this public necessity and to bring this new law to the statute book should be the first effort. After that then we can decide on the new location for the seat of county government.

The Southern Pacific has been granted an extension of time on the concession for the railroad south of Naco. It extends the time for completing and operating the first 20 kilometers for one year and extends the time for completion of the line to Tonichi to 1914. All work was suspended on this line several months ago. That would not indicate any hurry on the part of the Southern Pacific to reach Douglas.

There is a new Richmond in the field of the big popularity contest being conducted by the Kelly papers. Miss Throm, one of the most popular young ladies of Clifton, has entered the contest with declared intention of winning the Buick automobile. All the contestants are friends of the Kelly papers, and we wish that all might win in the race.

When the city elections are held in Arizona next month there will be further evidence of the fact that Republicans are not to be found with the victorious this year. The Democratic hosts of Douglas are surely getting ready to record their verdict on Republican deceit, hypocrisy and false promises. Whoop! Sabote!

It is possible that Roosevelt has intimated to President Taft that the only way to win success for his policies is to stand straight up and fight for them. The announcement that Taft and his cabinet are to take the stump and aggressively fight administration enemies may have come from a tip from the absent rough rider.

The news agency that could furnish a correct report of the interview which is to occur between Col. Roosevelt and Gifford Pinchot would land a scoop worth while and which would make every republican insurgent in the country stand on his hind legs to get.

The copper output in Arizona for the month of March shows a considerable increase over the month of April and when the figures are all in it will probably be found that the production last month was the largest ever recorded for a single month in the history of the territory.

Now that it has become known that the democrats will control the next congress "Uncle Joe" is slipping out the dope that he will not again be a candidate for speaker. But until the end of the present congress the present speaker will rule the republican roost.

The strenuousness of the trip of Col. Roosevelt has not materially lessened since he got away from the African hunting grounds. The rough rider is having his way and stirring things wherever he goes.

Copper prices and copper stocks are both in a bad way, according to reports. But in the meantime the Arizona copper mines continue to increase their output and the dividends for stockholders.

There is no mistaking the signs as indicated by city election results throughout the country yesterday. It is plain that the people have come to a determination to put the republicans out of business all along the line.

Governor Harmon, of Ohio, is looming up as the democratic presidential candidate in 1912. If he can win the Ohio governorship again this fall his candidacy for president will be a certainty.

The price of copper continues to go lower. If it continues to further decline it will not be long until some of the producers will have to go out of business.

At the present rate of profit-taking the Shattuck company ought not to delay the building of a smelter in Douglas, as proposed several years ago.

Whatever happens this year will not alter the fact that in the past Douglas has pulled off some of the greatest Fourth of July celebrations in the history of the Southwest.

The statehood bill continues to rest in the pigeon hole of the senate. No one seems to be interested in pushing that measure along.

About all you can read these days is of the failure of the republican party to make good to the people and of democratic victories.

Mining activity in Sonora continues to increase. Sonora is conceded to be the richest mineral state in the republic of Mexico.

The more we see of Young Ernie the more we realize that it takes a corking lightweight to even keep him busy.
